Finance and sustainable Development

Global warming and climate changes are particularly important in context of sustainable development, especially for developing countries. In this context, the urgency of banks to act as responsible corporate citizen in the society need to be emphasized. In this paper effort is made to suggest modified procedure for commercial lending by Indian commercial banks to enable them to safeguard their own interest and also help in promoting the environmental protection by industry. Paper explained the need for environmental protection, need for sensitization of branch managers and requested bankers to be an aware of funding environment related projects.
